Chapter 1 by Aj Orsini

CHAPTER 1

It all started when I was 12. I was hunting for food on the street. In the distance, I could hear a baby crying. I followed the noise until I came to a small, old house. I looked through the window saw the baby. Tears were stained on its cheeks and a young, tired woman was trying to calm him down.

Finally, the baby fell asleep and the woman laid him down in a small crib. The woman suddenly walked out of the kitchen area. There was a large man in the next room. He seemed to be yelling at her. Quickly, the woman walked away, head hanging low. She looked around the kitchen and finally found a plate. She began to put together food for the fat guy. I looked over at him. The first thing I noticed was a fancy Rolex on his fat wrist I needed to get it.

I waited outside the house for almost an hour until finally the woman left and the man fell asleep. I played with the door for a while until it finally opened. I crept into the house closing the door behind me. I snuck over to the couch the man was sleeping on, and I reached down to slip the Rolex off his wrist.

When I finally got it off, I took a deep breath. Suddenly, with a jolt, the man woke up. "HEY!" He screamed.

"Shit!" I ran away as fast as I could. I had no escape plan, so I had to risk it. With the man right behind me, I launched myself towards the window. For a few seconds it felt like I was underwater, but I could still breath. I hit the ground with a painful THUD! With the Rolex still in my hand, I got up and brushed myself off. I looked at the window to see the damage, but the window didn't have a single crack in it!

Suddenly the man hit and opened the door with a 12 in his hand. He looked straight at me. "WHERE ARE YOU, YOU LITTLE SHIT!" he yelled. "Was he joking? I was standing straight ahead of him. Keeping up the act, he began to walk toward the house. I quickly ran away while he was distracted. I plopped down onto my bed, clutching the Rolex to my chest.
